Local High School Students Volunteer to Support Hardworking Teachers with New Initiative

Ashburn, VA – August 2, 2013: Teens for Teachers, an innovative organization founded by high school students at Briar Woods High School, is excited to announce its launch as a volunteer program dedicated to assisting teachers throughout Loudoun County. This initiative aims to alleviate the workload of educators by providing reliable support for essential classroom tasks while allowing high school students to earn volunteer hours and foster meaningful relationships within their community.

Composed of enthusiastic and dedicated students, Teens for Teachers offers a range of services, including classroom setup and teardown, laminating materials, grading assignments, and more. By bridging the gap between students and educators, the organization fosters a collaborative environment that enhances the learning experience for all.

“Teachers are the backbone of our society. They have the critical job of teaching our youth and instilling values that will carry them into adulthood,” said Brooke Wivagg, the founder of Teens for Teachers. “Their job isn’t easy, and if students can assist with some of the busy work, then teachers can focus on what they do best—educating.”

With the new school year just weeks away, Teens for Teachers is actively seeking more students to join its ranks and teachers interested in utilizing its services. Anyone interested can contact TeensforTeachers@gmail.com.
